Thane Flyover Scare: 'Severe Cracks, Structural Deterioration' Shut Kasarvadavali Bridge, MMRDA Acts

THANE, D S RAJKUMAR:

A flyover that was built to ease one of Thane's busiest traffic corridors has itself become the centre of a safety inspection after a complaint raised concerns over its condition. The Kasarvadavali flyover on Ghodbunder Road was closed to traffic on Sunday afternoon, sending vehicles onto the road below and triggering long queues between Kasarvadavali and Brahmand. The closure came after a complaint about possible irregularities near sections adjoining the flyover's protective barrier. MMRDA officials inspected the structure as a precaution, although the authority has not yet confirmed whether the reported issue amounts to an actual structural defect. Traffic on the flyover was stopped at around 2 pm on Sunday following instructions from the Mumbai Metropolitan Region Development Authority (MMRDA). Vehicles were diverted underneath the flyover while officials examined the reported concern. Visuals from the site have drawn attention to deep cracks and fissures along parts of the safety parapet wall and concrete side barriers, raising questions about the condition of the recently constructed structure. However, the presence of visible cracks does not by itself establish that the flyover has suffered a structural failure. MMRDA's inspection will determine whether the reported irregularities pose any safety risk and whether corrective work is necessary. The inspection was initiated to ensure that commuters were not exposed to potential danger while the complaint was being assessed. The flyover's closure immediately affected traffic movement along Ghodbunder Road. With vehicles redirected to the road beneath the flyover, pressure increased on an already heavily used stretch. Long queues were reported between Kasarvadavali and Brahmand, affecting commuters travelling towards different parts of Thane for work and other purposes. Traffic police confirmed that the closure was carried out on MMRDA's instructions as a safety precaution. Personnel redirected vehicles away from the flyover and towards the route underneath it. There is currently no confirmed timeline for reopening the flyover, and it is also not clear whether the inspection will lead to repair or reinforcement work. The disruption comes at a time when the Kasarvadavali and Anand Nagar areas have witnessed substantial residential development. A growing number of housing complexes has brought more vehicles onto Ghodbunder Road, while heavy vehicles also contribute to the traffic load. The corridor frequently experiences congestion, making the flyover an important part of the area's road network. The temporary closure has therefore removed a key grade-separated route and pushed additional traffic onto the road below. The Kasarvadavali flyover was developed by MMRDA to help reduce traffic pressure in the area and improve movement along Ghodbunder Road. Its closure has highlighted how dependent the corridor is on the limited number of routes available to handle the growing volume of traffic. With residential development continuing around Kasarvadavali and Anand Nagar, any prolonged restriction on the flyover could add further pressure to the road network. The immediate priority remains the MMRDA inspection. The authority's assessment will establish whether the reported issue is cosmetic, requires repairs or points to a more serious concern with the structure. Citizens have called for accountability if any construction-related shortcomings are established, along with independent structural audits and durable reinforcement rather than superficial repairs. For now, the closure remains a precautionary measure. Commuters using Ghodbunder Road have been advised to expect congestion around Kasarvadavali and Brahmand while the inspection is underway and traffic continues to be diverted below the flyover.

3 CONGRESS CMS INVITED TO PM MODI'S BRICS DINNER, BUT DIDN'T SHOW UP; RAHUL GANDHI, KHARGE NOT INVITED

NEW DELHI, (AGENCIES):

Four chief ministers from Opposition-ruled states stayed away from the gala dinner hosted by Prime Minister Narendra Modi for participants of the 18th BRICS India 2026 Summit on Saturday, according to a T o I report. The absence of Opposition chief ministers came even as several chief ministers from BJP-run and allied states attended the dinner, making the gathering appear largely dominated by leaders from the governing alliance. However, official sources told the T o I that chief ministers from Opposition parties had also been invited but did not attend. Tamil Nadu Chief Minister Vijay was abroad when the dinner was held, while three Congress chief ministers invited to the event also chose not to attend. Telangana Chief Minister Revanth Reddy had accepted the invitation a day before the dinner, on September 12. However, his office later informed the government that he would be unable to attend because of "unavoidable circumstances". Kerala Chief Minister V D Satheesan and Karnataka Chief Minister D K Shivakumar also skipped the dinner. However, Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge and Leader of Opposition Rahul Gandhi were not invited. The chief ministers of Himachal Pradesh and Punjab were also not invited to the gala dinner. The decision to invite chief ministers from different states was part of the government's effort to hold several events linked to BRICS during India's 2026 presidency across different cities. Official sources described the decision of Opposition chief ministers to stay away as unfortunate. India assumed the BRICS Chairship for 2026, setting the stage for the 18th BRICS Summit in New Delhi. Early discussions focused on cooperation, with China calling for partnership with India and the BRICS S

Sherpa emphasizing group unity. However, geopolitical tensions, particularly the West Asia conflict involving Iran and the US-Israeli strikes, exposed deep divisions within BRICS, making consensus difficult. Despite these challenges, India hosted a high-level virtual Sherpa Channel meeting and later the BRICS Foreign Ministers' Meeting in New Delhi, where Prime Minister Modi highlighted BRICS' role in multilateralism. While the Foreign Ministers' Summit concluded without a joint statement on West Asia, India released a Chair's Statement. Preparations for the main summit intensified, with confirmations of attendance from Russian President Vladimir Putin and South Africa's president, and expectations for Chinese President Xi Jinping and Iranian President Masoud Pezeshkian. The summit, scheduled for September 12-13 in New Delhi, is expected to address non-traditional security challenges, trade, finance, and global power balances, with India attempting to mediate between Iran and the UAE. The BRICS bloc has expanded to 11 members, now accounting for a significant portion of global GDP and population, and is exploring alternatives to SWIFT for global payments. Pakistan's membership application has reportedly been stalled due to India's veto. BRICS heads of state and government attended the dinner along with Union ministers and chief ministers from BJP-run and allied states. CMS reached the venue together in shuttle buses before the reception. Chief ministers Yogi Adityanath of Uttar Pradesh, Pushkar Singh Dhami of Uttarakhand, Nayab S Saini of Haryana, Bhajan Lal Sharma of Rajasthan, Mohan Yadav of Madhya Pradesh, Himanta Biswa Sarma of Assam, Suwendu Adhikari of West Bengal, Rekha Gupta of Delhi, Devendra Fadnavis of Maharashtra and Bhupendra Patel of Gujarat were present. Most Union ministers, including Amit Shah, Kiren Rijiju, Nirmala Sitharaman, Mansukh Mandaviya and Ashwini Vaishnaw, also attended. Chinese President Xi Jinping, however, skipped the reception altogether after returning to his hotel to rest, drawing international attention for a separate reason. The absence of Opposition chief ministers is not unprecedented. In 2023, several chief ministers, including Siddaramaiah of Karnataka, K Chandrashekar Rao of Telangana, Y S Jagan Mohan Reddy of Andhra Pradesh, Pinarayi Vijayan of Kerala, Ashok Gehlot of Rajasthan, Bhupesh Baghel of Chhattisgarh and Naveen Patnaik of Odisha, did not attend the G20 gala dinner hosted by President Droupadi Murmu. Similarly, when Yogi Adityanath was sworn in as Uttar Pradesh chief minister in March 2022, several Opposition leaders skipped the ceremony. There has also been a history of political exchanges over attendance at official events. The BJP has previously accused Rahul Gandhi of skipping solemn state events despite receiving invitations, while Opposition parties have criticised the government for not inviting Gandhi or Kharge to state banquets. The BRICS Summit, held under India's 2026 presidency, brought together leaders of the 11-member grouping. The discussions covered multilateralism, reform of global governance, supply chain resilience, climate finance and digital cooperation.

Swatantra Bhardwaj Gets Three-Week Interim Bail in Jantar Mantar Assault Case,

NEW DELHI, AJAY UPADHYAY:

Swatantra Bhardwaj has received major relief from the Patiala House Court in connection with an alleged assault during a protest at Jantar Mantar in July. The court on Tuesday granted him three weeks of interim bail.

The case relates to an alleged assault involving the father of a teenage worker of the 'Cockroach Janata Party' (CJP). The matter was heard by Additional Sessions Judge Saurabh Pratap Singh Lall, who passed the order granting interim bail. According to the case, a dispute took place during a protest at Jantar Mantar in July, where the father of a teenage CJP worker was allegedly assaulted. Following the incident, a complaint was filed and the Delhi Police initiated an investigation. During the course of the investigation, Swatantra Bhardwaj was arrested in connection with the case. The matter subsequently came before the Patiala House Court, where his bail plea was taken up for hearing. The court considered the facts and circumstances of the case as well as the arguments advanced by both sides before granting Bhardwaj interim relief for a period of three weeks. The interim bail order provides temporary relief to Bhardwaj while the legal proceedings in the case continue. Further developments in the matter are expected as the case progresses before the court.

'I Will Go Alone': Manoj Jarange Announces Mumbai March After Police Deny Protest Permission

MUMBAI, SURESH DHERE:

Maratha reservation activist Manoj Jarange announced that he would travel to Mumbai alone on September 15 to stage a protest at Azad Maidan, a day after Mumbai Police denied permission for his proposed indefinite hunger strike in the city. Jarange, who has been on an indefinite fast at Antarwali Sarati village in Maharashtra's Jalna district, said he would leave for Mumbai at 11 am on Tuesday despite the police decision. He appealed to members of the Maratha community not to gather in large numbers in the state capital immediately. "Fearing the strength of the Maratha community, the government has denied permission to go to Mumbai. As a counter to the government's decision, I will leave for Mumbai alone on September 15 at 11 am," Jarange said while addressing his supporters. He said only around 10 people and two ambulances would accompany him on the planned journey, and urged supporters to remain peaceful in their villages and conserve their resources. Mumbai Police on Sunday rejected a request from Jarange's team to hold an indefinite hunger strike in Mumbai from September 19. The police cited security and law-and-order concerns amid the ongoing Ganeshotsav celebrations. According to the police, the request was also turned down over potential violations of rules governing public meetings, demonstrations and processions, along with alleged non-compliance with venue-related conditions during some of Jarange's previous protests. Following the denial, Jarange accused Chief Minister Devendra Fadnavis of attempting to prevent his protest out of fear of the Maratha community's strength. He also alleged that disturbances could be created during a larger Maratha mobilisation and that the community could subsequently be blamed for any unrest during the Ganesh festival. "Fadnavis's people will create a disturbance during the Maratha rally and blame the Maratha community. That is why I have decided to go alone. Now, will the government deny permission for my solo march as well?" he said. Jarange is currently on the 16th day of his indefinite fast, and his health condition has reportedly deteriorated after he refused water, saline and medical treatment. Despite his condition, the activist maintained that he would continue his agitation until his demands were addressed. "The road ahead is full of obstacles, but I will not retreat from the struggle for the community," he said. Describing himself as a follower of Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj, Jarange said he was prepared to continue the fight until his last breath and wanted to convey that he would "die but did not surrender". At the same time, he said the possibility of talks with the Maharashtra government remained open. Jarange said his side was willing to engage in discussions at any open ground, but insisted that the government must move beyond assurances and implement the community's demands. What Is Jarange Demanding? One of Jarange's key demands is the issuance of a Government Resolution (GR) allowing eligible members of the Maratha community to claim reservation benefits available to the Kunbi community under the Other Backward Classes (OBC) category on the basis of historical records and gazette documents. OBC groups have opposed the demand, arguing that extending reservation benefits to Marathas could affect their existing share of OBC benefits. Jarange has warned political leaders that the Maratha community would determine their political future in upcoming elections if its demands are not addressed. This is not Jarange's first major protest in Mumbai. On August 29 last year, he launched an indefinite hunger strike at Azad Maidan over the demand for Maratha reservation. The agitation triggered disruptions in parts of Mumbai before it was called off after the state government accepted some of his demands. His latest announcement comes amid renewed tensions over the Maratha reservation issue, with Jarange now preparing to head towards Mumbai despite the police denying permission for his proposed indefinite hunger strike.

Luxury Cars, Watches, Wig: Conman Arrested In Rs 30 Crore Investment Fraud In Gujarat

AHEMDABAD, UMANG RAWAL:

A 56-year-old man accused of defrauding investors of more than Rs 30 crore through a stock market scam has been arrested in Gujarat, an official said on Monday. The accused allegedly wore a wig to conceal his identity and used three different aliases. Identified as Roshan Bhushan Sheth, the accused allegedly lured 42 investors across Maharashtra and Gujarat by promising 5 per cent monthly returns. According to an Economic Offences Wing (EOW) official, he used the fraud to fund a lavish lifestyle that included luxury flats, high-end cars and expensive watches. Sheth was arrested from a residential building in Valsad in July. The probe agency said Sheth showed investors fabricated profit statements to make them believe their money was being traded in the stock market. While around Rs 5 crore was collected as principal investment, the total losses reported by victims, including an NRI woman, stand at approximately Rs 30.26 crore. The fraud surfaced after Kandivali resident Sanjay Hiralal Shah, 60, approached Mumbai Police Commissioner Deven Bharti in April and alleged that his family had been cheated of Rs 10.81 crore. Investigators found that Sheth had befriended Shah's software engineer son in 2020, claiming he was developing a trading app called 'Investok'. He allegedly convinced the family to invest and later used the same pitch to attract other investors, showing them manipulated Excel sheets during meetings at his apartments in Sion and Matunga. Sheth allegedly paid around Rs 3.8 crore in small "profit" instalments to keep the scheme going. He stopped the payments in December 2025 and disappeared in April, the official said. Technical surveillance helped the EOW trace Sheth to a residential building in Valsad. After keeping the location under surveillance for three days, officers entered his apartment disguised as housekeeping staff and arrested him. Police found that Sheth had used three identities at different stages of his life — Jayesh Hasmukhbhai Shah in his youth, Rahul Atulbhai Parekh while he was in Delhi, and Roshan Bhushan Sheth in Mumbai. The authorities seized a BMW, a Mercedes, a Mahindra Thar, 14 luxury watches, gold ornaments worth Rs 1.67 crore and Rs 17 lakh in cash. Three residential properties were also attached, the official said. A chargesheet filed on September 1 names 37 witnesses, including salon staff who maintained Sheth's wig and helped police verify his identity. The EOW has appealed to other victims to come forward with details of their investments.

Mumbai Biker Shares Terrifying Near-Miss After Metal Debris Hits Helmet: ‘I Narrowly Escaped’

Mumbai, Suresh Dhere: A man was going about his day in Mumbai when a sharp piece of metal debris allegedly came crashing down on him. The incident took place near Malad's Inorbit Mall signal on Tuesday, September 15, when he was riding through the busy road. What could have ended in a serious injury, or worse, fortunately turned into a near-miss, all thanks to his helmet. Following the incident, the biker named Aditya shared pictures of his damaged helmet and recounted the frightening incident. He revealed that the metal piece struck his helmet shortly after he crossed the Inorbit signal. "When the city is out to kill you. What a terrifying experience this morning," he wrote in the post. "A piece of sharp metal debris fell on my helmet just after the Inorbit signal. Thankfully, I was wearing a helmet. I narrowly escaped what could have been a darn serious injury." In a follow-up post, he spoke about how unsafe roads, overhead structures and nearby vehicles can feel during everyday commutes. "Scary af when the roads, overhead infrastructure, and the adjoining vehicles feel unsafe everyday. It will take me a while to forget the clinking of the metal after it hit the ground after rushing off of my helmet. Terrifying," he said.

"This would have been a terrible way to die." While he did not exactly mention where the metal debris came from or how it ended up hitting his helmet, the incident has since caught the attention of social media users, with people questioning the safety on Mumbai roads. "Bro dodged a bullet. Literally," said a user. "This is unacceptable, everyday living in Mumbai feels like we're living in a final destination universe," another wrote. An individual mentioned, "Mumbai needs to up its safety game bhai. You can't have debris falling on people's heads like this. People will just start avoiding standing/ passing under these bridges and via ducts like they used to avoid going under railway bridges when bio toilets didn't exist." Meanwhile, some also noticed a sticker on his helmet, which said, "In case of an accident, DO NOT REMOVE HELMET! Unless you are a doctor or paramedic." Reacting to the sticker, a person quipped, "That sticker on your Helmet is needs to be mandatory and everyone should be aware of it."

Maharashtra is ready to prevent theft and leakage of minerals from today!

Revenue Department brings digital revolution in minor minerals 'Mahakhanij 2.0' system inaugurated by the Chief Minister Revenue target of Rs 25,000 crore in the next 5 years Revenue Minister Chandrashekhar Bawankule's belief

Mumbai, Sachin Murdeshwar:

The state-of-the-art digital system 'Mahakhanij 2.0', developed by the Revenue Department to bring complete transparency and efficiency in the mining, transportation, licensing and monitoring process of minor minerals in Maharashtra, was inaugurated by Chief Minister Devendra Fadnavis at a cabinet meeting. Since the traditional process of managing minor minerals is largely paper-based and human-intervention-based, there were many difficulties in monitoring it; to overcome this, Revenue Minister Chandrashekhar Bawankule has taken this decision to integrate cutting-edge technology into the minor minerals administration, and on his own initiative, a digital revolution is coming in the minor minerals administration through this medium. Additional Chief Secretary of Revenue Department Vikas Kharde made a presentation on this. Konkarn Divisinal Commissioner Rubal Agarwal, Joint Secretary Manisha Jayabhaye, RailTel Company Head Vinod Agarwal, Konkarn Joint Commissioner Ravindra Pawar were present. Through the 'Mahakhanij' system, a revenue of about Rs 16,000 crore has been collected in the state government's treasury in the last five years. Now, through the new and advanced version of 'Mahakhanij 2.0', an ambitious target of collecting revenue of Rs 25,000 crore in the next five years has been set.

Key features and technologies of 'Mahakhanij 2.0':

- * 100% Digital Transport License (DigiTP): There will no longer be a need for a physical paper transport license. A fully digital license (DigiTP) based on QR Code and Barcode will be issued, making the licensing process easier and faster.

- Real-Time Monitoring through GPS and AI: Mineral transport vehicles will be monitored in real-time through GPS, ANPR, GIS and Geofencing. If the vehicle deviates from the prescribed route, the system will provide immediate alert messages. Artificial Intelligence (AI) and video analytics will be used to speed up the decision-making process.

- 24x7 Control Center at Konkarn Bhavan: A state-level 24x7 Konkarn Bhavan will be set up. This centre will centrally monitor all mineral licenses, vehicle movements and activities in mines in the state. For this, the Divisinal Commissioner of Konkarn Division has been appointed as the 'State Coordinator'.

Control illegal mining through drones and LiDAR: Modern technologies like Drone, LiDAR, Bathymetric Survey and Remote Sensing will be used for accurate mapping and assessment of mining areas. This will enable strict control over illegal mining and unauthorized transportation.

Automatic fine and online panchnama: The amount of fine will be automatically determined by the system depending on the nature of the violation. Online Panchnama, notices and fine collection will completely eliminate human intervention and bring transparency.

Integration with other systems: The 'Mahakhanij 2.0' system will be connected to various government systems like VAHAN, Mahabhulekh, Land Records, DigiLocker, BPMS, CCTV and Weighbridge.

- Grievance Redressal for Citizens and Professionals: A separate 'Grievance Redressal System' and a 24x7 call center (08065070555) have been started for speedy resolution of the complaints of concerned citizens and professionals. Also, a Dedicated District Executive will be appointed in each District Collector's office. Android and iOS applications have been made available for field officers and employees, which will be a very important step towards 'Digital Maharashtra'.

Fertilizer sales smooth in Thane district through 'Framework for Fertilizer Sales' app

290 metric tons of fertilizer sold by booking through app in 20 days; Farmers can book fertilizer from home

Mumbai, Suresh Dhere:

The process of selling fertilizer has started smoothly in Thane district from August 27, 2026 through the Central Government's 'Framework for Fertilizer Sale' (FFS) app. With this new digital system, farmers can book the required fertilizer from home and can purchase fertilizer by showing the QR code received after booking at the relevant selected Agricultural Service Center. Under the guidance of Zilla Parishad Chief Executive Officer Ranjit Yadav, the main objective of the FFS system is to bring transparency in the fertilizer sales and distribution process, provide fertilizer to farmers at the right time as per their needs and effectively manage the entire fertilizer distribution system. Due to this system, farmers will not have to spend unnecessary time for purchasing fertilizer. Also, it will help in saving time, labor and financial cost of farmers by creating more convenience in the actual fertilizer availability and sales process. In the state of Maharashtra, this new system was launched in a total of seven districts including Thane district on August 27, 2026. In Thane district, 290 metric tons of fertilizer has been sold by booking through the FFS app in the last 20 days. For effective implementation of the FFS system in Thane district, all input vendors as well as field level officers and employees have been trained through district level master trainers. Also, farmers have been informed about the FFS app through Gram Sabha and other village level programs and a large scale awareness has been created about it. To immediately resolve the problems faced by farmers while using the app, taluka-level and district-level help desks have been created, and their contact numbers have also been published for the information of farmers. The 'Framework for Fertilizer Sales' (FFS) app is available on Google Play Store. Farmers should first download the app on their mobile and register through Agri Stack ID or Aadhaar. Then, verify the information about their land and crops. If you log in through Agri Stack ID, the relevant land information is automatically available in the system. However, if you log in through Aadhaar, you have to fill in the land information yourself. After that, you can select the relevant group as per your requirement and book for the required fertilizer. The farmer can choose the vendor of his convenience from the list of input vendors who have fertilizer available. The QR code received after the booking process is completed will be valid for three days. During this period, fertilizer can be purchased by showing the QR code at the concerned Agricultural Service Center. After that, if fertilizer is to be purchased again, it is necessary to make a new booking and obtain a new QR code. The process of booking and purchasing fertilizer through the FFS app has been made easier, transparent and convenient for farmers. Therefore, all the farmers in the district should make maximum use of this digital system and book and purchase fertilizer through the app as per their requirement, Agricultural Development Officer Munir Bachotkar has appealed.

Crorepati MLA Parag Shah turns into a beggar for a day on his Guru’s instructions!

Begged for food, ate with the money received and swept roads and footpaths to experience life from a different perspective

MUMBAI, (SACHIN MURDESHWAR): -
Putting aside his luxurious lifestyle, security arrangements and convoy of expensive vehicles for a day, BJP MLA from Ghatkopar East Parag Shah, who is known for his substantial wealth, took on the appearance of a beggar on the instructions of his Guru and experienced life on the streets. A video of his unusual experience has gone viral on social media and has become a topic of discussion. During the Jain religious period of Chaturmas, Parag Shah's Guru, Rashtrasant Namramuniji Maharaj, advised him to experience life as an ordinary beggar for a day in order to understand a different aspect of life more closely. Accepting his Guru's guidance, Shah completely changed his appearance. After applying makeup, he disguised himself as a beggar and moved around various parts of Ghatkopar. During the experience, he asked people for alms and used the money he received to buy food, experiencing the circumstances and challenges faced by people living on the streets. He also swept roads and footpaths as part of the experience. Remarkably, none of the people he encountered recognized him as Ghatkopar MLA Parag Shah. The experience gave him an opportunity to understand more closely the everyday struggles of ordinary people and those living on the streets. For that day, he had neither the identity of an MLA nor security personnel or a convoy of luxury vehicles accompanying him. One of the most interesting aspects of the experience was that Shah later returned to the same places after removing his makeup and spoke to the people he had encountered. Many were surprised to learn that the person they had seen earlier as a beggar was actually Ghatkopar MLA Parag Shah. Rashtrasant Namramuniji Maharaj later shared a video of this unique experience while blessing devotees during Chaturmas, bringing the incident into the public domain. Through this experience under his Guru's guidance, MLA Parag Shah sought to understand the lives and daily struggles of underprivileged and needy sections of society more closely.

Rajasthan Civic Polls: BJP Edges Past Congress, Independents Steal Show In CM's Hometown

Jaipur, Praveen Saini:

The ruling BharatiyaJanata Party (BJP) emerged as the largest party in Rajasthan's urban local body elections on Monday, winning 4,179 wards against the Congress' 3,613. The BJP secured clear majorities in four of the state's 10 municipal corporations, while the Congress won a majority in Bikaner. Independents, meanwhile, emerged as a strong third force, winning 2,273 wards.The results were particularly striking in Bharatpur, the hometown of Chief Minister Bhajanlal Sharma. Independents won 36 of the 65 wards, well ahead of the BJP's 20 and Congress' seven. The BSP and Rashtriya Loktantrik Party (RLP) won one ward each. Sharma called the BJP's overall performance a "historic victory", attributing it to public faith in the party and the leadership of Prime Minister NarendraModi.

BJP Takes Four Corporations The BJP crossed the majority mark in Jaipur, Udaipur, Kota and Bhilwara. In Jaipur, it won

78 of the 150 wards, while Congress secured 53 and Independents 15. In Udaipur, the BJP won 53 of 80 wards against Congress' 23. It also secured 45 of 70 wards in Bhilwara and 55 of 100 in Kota.Congress, however, secured a majority in Bikaner, winning 42 of 80 wards against the BJP's 27. Jodhpur produced a deadlock, with both BJP and Congress winning 44 of the 100 wards.Congress emerged as the largest party in Ajmer and Pali but fell short of a majority. In Ajmer, it won 37 of 80 wards, while BJP secured 32. In Pali, Congress won 29 of 65 wards against BJP's 21.

Congress Springs Jhalawar Surprise

One of Congress' biggest gains came in Jhalawar, widely seen as a stronghold of former chief ministerVasundharaRaje. Congress won 29 of the 45 wards, while BJP secured 13. However, BJP retained its grip on nearby Jhalrapatan, where Raje is the sitting MLA, winning 22 of 35 wards.InAlwar, BJP emerged as the largest party with 28 wards, followed by Congress with 23 and Independents with 13. According to State Election Commission figures, results for 10,235 of the 10,244 wards being counted had been declared by 8.30 pm. More than 1.44 crore voters were eligible to vote in the two-phase polling held on September 9 and 11. Rajasthan Civic Polls: BJP Suffers Setback In Vasundhara Raje's Jhalawar Bastion, Close Contest In Jodhpur

Jodhpur, (Agencies):

The Congress has scored a significant victory in Jhalawar Municipal Council, a part of Rajasthan closely associated with former chief minister and BJP leader VasundharaRaje.The Congress won 29 of the 45 wards in Jhalawar, comfortably crossing the majority mark. The BJP finished with 13 wards, while two seats went to Independents and one to the AamAadmiParty.The result assumes significance because of Jhalawar's long association with Raje's political career. Raje has represented the Jhalawar-BaranLokSabha constituency, while her son Dushyant Singh is the sitting MP from Jhalawar-Baran.However, the result is not a complete sweep of Raje's political stronghold. The BJP retained a majority in Jhalrapatan, Raje's Assembly constituency.

Congress Makes Its Mark Despite BJP's Statewide Lead

The Jhalawar result stands out against the BJP's overall performance in Rajasthan's civic polls. The BJP emerged as the largest party in 148 urban local bodies, while the Congress led in 104, according to the latest tally.For the Congress, the victory in Jhalawar offers a significant political boost, particularly because of the constituency's association with Raje. However, it is a major setback for the BJP in a municipal council where the party has traditionally had a strong presence.

Bikaner: Congress Secures Clear Majority

The Congress also registered a major victory in Bikaner Municipal Corporation, winning 42 wards and securing a clear majority.The result gives the Congress another significant urban-body win to highlight as the BJP maintains its overall lead across Rajasthan. Along with Jhalawar, Bikaner gives the party two important victories in the civic polls.

Jodhpur Ends In A Dead Heat

In Jodhpur, the contest ended in a close finish, with the BJP and Congress winning 44 wards each.The result leaves the corporation without a clear majority, with Independents holding the remaining seats. UnlikeJhalawar and Bikaner, Jodhpur does not give either major party a clear victory. The focus now shifts to the post-poll arithmetic and whether either side can secure the numbers needed to form the civic administration.

BJP Retains Overall Advantage

Despite Congress victories in Jhalawar and Bikaner, the BJP has maintained a clear edge across Rajasthan's urban local bodies.The latest tally showed the BJP winning 4,171 wards, compared with 3,597 for the Congress.

Ladakh's Constitutional Future: Why Article 371 Matters

The Union government has recently conducted the next round of a sustained process to fulfil the aspirations of the people of the Union Territory of Ladakh. On September 9, a sub-committee of the Union Home Ministry met representatives from Ladakh in New Delhi, including the Leh Apex Body and the Kargil Democratic Alliance. The decisions taken at this meeting will ensure a UT-level elected body for Ladakh. This body will have sufficient legislative, executive and financial powers. Its members will be chosen through direct elections from constituencies rather than indirectly through the hill councils. Under a special provision of Article 371, constitutional protection has also been accepted for land, culture, heritage, the environment and natural resources. However, on September 10, an ultimatum was issued by some leaders from Ladakh. The government has been given one week to provide an assurance that it will pursue the Sixth Schedule instead of Article 371. If the government does not accept these demands, a protest march will be organised from September 19 to 24, with a wider agitation to follow. That is not a negotiating position. It is an attempt to force a veto over a constitutional process that concerns all of Ladakh. While those opposing the outcome of these talks claimed that the September 9 meeting produced nothing new, many others who participated in the discussions have a different view. Thupstan Chhewang, a former Member of Parliament who led the Leh Apex Body until last year, called the talks fruitful and questioned the need for a fresh agitation when dialogue was producing results. Following the September 9 talks, Ladakh's Member of Parliament, Mohamad Haneefa Jan, said the Home Ministry was serious about establishing the legislative framework and providing safeguards under Article 371. He also stressed the urgency of restarting recruitment for young people who have been waiting for years to appear for examinations. The earlier rounds of talks have already been productive and have produced substantial outcomes. The Union government has ensured that 85 per cent of government posts in the UT of Ladakh are reserved for locals, with 80 per cent of these reserved for Scheduled Tribes. A domicile framework has also been put in place, five official languages have been notified, and one-third of hill council seats have been reserved for women. However, those opposing the outcome of these meetings and threatening agitation have demanded that the entire process be halted until their demand to bring Ladakh under the Sixth Schedule is implemented. The fact of the matter is that the demand for applying the Sixth Schedule of the Constitution instead of Article 371 may not serve Ladakh's interests.

The Real Constitutional Question

The nature of the dispute in Ladakh has changed quietly. For the past six years, the central question was whether the region would have an elected legislature at all. That issue has now been resolved. The remaining disagreement concerns which constitutional mechanism should provide that legislature and how much time should be allowed for drafting it. This is a much narrower question than the broader public debate suggests, and it should be examined on its own merits. India has developed two different constitutional mechanisms for its tribal and frontier regions. The Sixth Schedule, introduced in 1950, was designed for tribal districts within states. It provides autonomous district councils with powers over land, forests, village administration, inheritance and customary practices. For three generations, this framework has operated in the hill districts of Assam, Meghalaya, Tripura and Mizoram. A second mechanism emerged later and addressed a different need. The Article 371 provisions began with Nagaland in 1962 and were subsequently extended to Sikkim in 1975 and Mizoram in 1986. Unlike the Sixth Schedule, these provisions do not establish a sub-state council. Instead, they place specific protections for particular communities directly within the Constitution, with provisions tailored to the circumstances of each territory. Over several decades, the Constitution evolved towards recognising that frontier societies may require customised arrangements rather than a uniform model. Ladakh is now being offered the latter model, while those opposing it are seeking the earlier one. This raises a fundamental question: which arrangement would serve Ladakh's interests in the best possible way? The answer to this question is linked closely to another question: which provision would be more difficult for a future government to withdraw or dilute? The answer is clearly Article 371.

The Provision Rarely Discussed

The reason that makes Article 371 a better option for Ladakh can be found in a provision that receives little attention in the public debate. Paragraph 21 of the Sixth Schedule allows Parliament to amend the Schedule through ordinary legislation and specifically states that such an amendment will not be considered a constitutional amendment. This means that a future Parliament, acting with a simple majority, could potentially alter Ladakh's protections without having to meet the two-thirds threshold required under Article 368. An arrangement created under Article 371 does not provide the same opening. Changes to it require a constitutional amendment. The Nagaland and Mizoram models go further by requiring the concerned elected legislature to pass its own resolution before certain categories of central legislation can become applicable in the state. There is another important limitation to the Sixth Schedule demand. It does not establish a legislature in the conventional sense. Instead, it creates district councils. Ladakh already has such councils—one in Leh, established in 1995, and another in Kargil, established in 2003. Even if the Sixth Schedule were extended to Ladakh tomorrow, the region would still not have a legislative assembly, a council of ministers, or territorial legislative powers. The real gap in Ladakh's governance is therefore not at the district level. It is the absence of the institutional tier above it. That is precisely the level that would be addressed by the proposed arrangement by the Union Home Ministry. The attempts to derail this arrangement would ultimately affect Ladakh's own interests. From Periphery To Fulcrum: India's BRICS Journey Under PM Modi

Tuhin A Sinha.

India's successful conclusion of the New Delhi Declaration at the 18th BRICS Summit is far more than a diplomatic formality. In an expanded BRICS – larger, more diverse and inevitably more complex – getting all members to agree on a substantive joint declaration is itself a significant achievement. That it was negotiated, finalised and released with relative seamlessness is a testament to India's ability to bring countries with divergent interests to the table and take everyone along. There is a striking continuity with September 2023, when India achieved the seemingly improbable at the G20 in New Delhi: a consensus declaration despite deep divisions over the Russia-Ukraine war. Three years later, India has demonstrated the same diplomatic muscle at BRICS, on an even more complex canvas. BRICS countries acknowledged that fossil fuels will still play an important role in the world's energy mix, particularly for emerging markets and developing economies. The New Delhi Declaration is, therefore, not merely a communiqué; it is a diplomatic scorecard. The first and most consequential takeaway for India is the declaration's unequivocal condemnation of the Pahalgam terrorist attack. For New Delhi, this goes well beyond the wording of a communiqué. The declaration is a powerful endorsement of Prime Minister Modi's zero-tolerance approach to terrorism – in all its forms and manifestations – which he has consistently championed at global forums. India has spent years arguing that there can be no distinction between "good" and "bad" terrorism, and that terror cannot be justified by political grievances or given geopolitical cover. For this principle to find collective expression in an expanded BRICS is a significant diplomatic gain. The second major takeaway is India's growing legitimacy in the debate on reforming global governance. The declaration backs the aspirations of India and Brazil for a greater role in the United Nations, including the Security Council. India's case is no longer simply about its size or population. It is increasingly an argument about the credibility of the international system itself. An international order that claims to represent the world cannot indefinitely exclude the world's largest democracy and one of its fastest-growing major economies from its highest decision-making table. But perhaps the most consequential strategic shift is that India is increasingly able to speak for the Global South without speaking against the West. This is one of the defining features of Prime Minister Modi's foreign policy. India works with the United States and Europe while remaining an active member of BRICS. It participates in the Quad while engaging through the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation. It maintains its longstanding strategic relationship with Russia while deepening partnerships with the Gulf, Israel and the Indo-Pacific. This is calibrated multilateralism—engaging competing centres of power simultaneously while preserving strategic autonomy. The G20 presidency demonstrated this capability. The Voice of Global South initiative reinforced it. India's leadership of BRICS is now taking it further.

The economic opportunity

BRICS is not merely a diplomatic platform. It is a potentially enormous economic opportunity. For India, however, the trade numbers reveal both promise and challenge. India continues to run a substantial merchandise trade deficit with BRICS partners. The answer cannot be to retreat from these markets. It must be to capture a far larger share of them. The New Delhi Declaration's emphasis on trade facilitation, resilient and diversified supply chains, services, MSMEs and opposition to unilateral tariff and non-tariff barriers creates a favourable framework. India should aggressively expand exports of engineering goods, pharmaceuticals, electronics, automobiles, chemicals, textiles, processed food and digital and professional services. The ambition should be clear: India should not merely be a large market for BRICS—it should become one of BRICS' principal production and export hubs. The emphasis on local-currency settlements and cross-border payment interoperability could further reduce transaction costs and deepen commercial links. India's experience with digital public infrastructure and UPI gives it a natural advantage in this emerging payments architecture. If BRICS evolves into a platform for easier payments, deeper supply chains and greater market access, its economic value to India could ultimately prove as consequential as its diplomatic value.

From the weakest link to the fulcrum

The contrast with the UPA era is striking. When BRICS first emerged, India was certainly seen as a country of enormous potential. But that potential had not translated into commensurate economic weight or geopolitical leverage. Infrastructure bottlenecks were severe, policy uncertainty was high and the country's ability to convert its demographic advantage into sustained economic power remained in question. India was a participant in the emerging architecture—but rarely its agenda-setter. That has changed. The India of 2026 is a fundamentally different proposition: one of the world's largest economies, a major technology and services power, an increasingly important manufacturing destination, a digital public infrastructure pioneer and one of the most consequential markets for global capital. But the transformation is not merely economic. It is diplomatic. India today has something that economic size alone cannot buy: the ability to convene, negotiate and shape consensus among countries that do not always agree with one another – or with India. That is what New Delhi demonstrated at the G20 in 2023. And that is what it has demonstrated again at BRICS in 2026. The larger story, therefore, is not simply about India's rise within BRICS. It is about India's changing position in the international system. For decades, strategic autonomy was often understood primarily as preserving distance from competing power centres. Under Modi, it has acquired a more muscular meaning. It means having enough economic weight, diplomatic credibility and strategic partnerships to engage everyone without becoming subordinate to anyone. That is why India can be simultaneously a leading voice of the Global South, an important partner of the West, a member of BRICS, a participant in the Quad and a major voice in virtually every important multilateral conversation. India is no longer standing at the periphery of competing power centres, waiting to see which way the world moves. It is increasingly helping determine the direction in which the world moves. The New Delhi Declaration is, therefore, another milestone in a remarkable journey – from being the relatively weaker link in an emerging grouping to becoming one of its principal agenda-setters. From the G20 consensus in Delhi to the BRICS consensus in New Delhi, the message is unmistakable. India has moved from the periphery to the fulcrum. And perhaps the most remarkable difference between the India of the UPA era and the India of today is this: India is no longer merely seeking a seat at the high table. It is increasingly helping decide what happens at that table.

'Sarkar Unki, System Humara': What Nationalists Can Learn From Marxist Thinker Gramsci

Abhijit Majumder.

Something extraordinary happened on social media on September 5. The world's richest man, a carefree capitalist most hated by the Left, appreciatively quote-posted about a Marxist thinker on his platform, X. "He was right," Elon Musk wrote in a long post about the dangerous genius of Italian Marxist Antonio Gramsci, who was thrown in jail by fascist dictator Benito Mussolini. Gramsci's influence is so profound that sections of the hard Right started appropriating his ideas and turning the tables on the Left. Which is perhaps why Marxists do not talk too much about him these days. So, how did this hunched man, who failed to reach even 5 feet and suffered chronic ill health, grow so tall in the realm of potent ideas? What did he propose? Gramsci showed that the real fight was for the cultural high ground. Power does not start at the EVM machine but instead in textbooks, classrooms, social science theses, newsrooms, OTT series and reels. What shapes culture eventually shapes a society's laws, behaviour and destiny. He figured that workers didn't take over nations in Europe like Lenin's masses did in Russia because, in the West, power does not only sit in parliaments or police stations. It flows through the "common sense" of people built by culture. So, the consensus on what is good or bad, acceptable or deplorable, can be created by the ideological capture of institutions. It is this underlay of power which the character of Radhika Menon in The Kashmir Files, played by Pallavi Joshi, describes eloquently: "Sarkar unki hai toh kya hua, system toh humarahai (so what if they are in government, the system is still ours)." It is this cultural hegemony which allows one to run the country even after losing elections. Storming the palace is the short war, but winning on the cultural battlefield is the critical long siege which stops the first from collapsing, argued Gramsci in his Prison Notebooks. In today's India, for instance, the BJP under Narendra Modi has been able to quite efficiently shift the Overton window from Kashmir to triple talaq, from the Aryan Invasion Theory to Ayodhya. But it has still not been able to fully overpower the Islamo-

Communist cultural hegemony which Jawaharlal Nehru unleashed through academia and media or the colonial mindset implanted by Thomas Babington Macaulay as far back as 1835 through the English Education Act. The Hindutva or nationalist ecosystem in India's media and academia is nascent, fawning and faltering. Whether it will survive the fall of a favourable government is doubtful. The Modi government erred in touching education last, almost ten years after coming to power. The Left's cultural hegemony – an unsaid tribute to Gramsci – still holds sway over a large section of India's urban, educated youth. The recent CJI movement highlighted that. The Right still does not have enough artists, deans, NGOs and HR departments to shape "common sense" more effectively and permanently. It does not control sitcoms or Wikipedia's tone. Meta can still arrogate to itself the power to block the Prime Minister's post. It does not have enough of its own ideologically sharp, intelligent people on exam boards, film funds, museum trusts, or in the bureaucracy and armed forces training centres. Also, Gramsci placed great value on the "organic intellectual". He would pick a village schoolmaster over a prime-time shout-show any day. If nationalists want to retain power for many decades irrespective of electoral outcomes, they have to win the culture war. Ironically, a 20th-century Italian thinker from the ideological enemy camp has left a frighteningly brilliant playbook to learn from and act on.

Pakistan All Set To Play In Men’s Asian Champions Trophy In India In October

New Delhi, (Agencies):

The Pakistan men's hockey team is set to feature in the men's Asian Champions Trophy in India next month in Mohali, Punjab, Chief Minister Bhagwant Mann said on Monday, citing the Indian government's policy which permits India and Pakistan to play on Indian soil during multi-lateral tournaments. The Asian Champions Trophy, scheduled from October 27 to November 5, will feature India, Pakistan, China, Japan, Malaysia and Korea, with games to be played at hockey stadiums in Jalandhar and Mohali.“There is no problem in multi-national tournaments. Maybe individual series (India and Pakistan) can’t take place,” Mann said while speaking to the media. India's central sports policy on Pakistan bars bilateral sporting engagements with the neighbouring nation, against which India launched a brief military offensive last year after the Pahalgam terror attack that killed 26 people.But in line with the Olympic Charter, the Sports Ministry has clarified that India and Pakistan can compete against each other in multilateral tournaments, while athletes from across the border will not be barred from participating in such competitions hosted in India. Despite the policy, Pakistan withdrew from the 2025 Junior World Cup in Tamil Nadu, citing heightened tensions between the two nations in the wake of Operation Sindoor.Mann said that league-stage ACT games will be played at Jalandhar, while the semi-final and the final will be played at Mohali Stadium.Assuring full support for the event, Mann said that Punjab was committed to hosting the tournament, which will be the first of its kind to be held in the state.

Cristiano Ronaldo's Al Nassr Makes History, Breaks 87-Year-Old World Record

Riyadh, (Agencies):

Cristiano Ronaldo-led Al Nassr have entered the history books after becoming the first team to score in 94 consecutive matches in a top-flight league, surpassing a record that had stood for 87 years. The Saudi Pro League milestone was secured dramatically on Saturday, when substitute Abdullah Al-Hamdan rescued a 1-1 draw against Al Khaleej with a superb long-range strike. The goal extended Al Nassr's scoring run beyond Buenos Aires-based Club Atlético River Plate's previous record of 93 consecutive league matches, set between September 1936 and June 1939.Al Nassr's historic streak began on December 8, 2023, when they defeated Al Riyadh 4-1. Their previous league match without a goal was a 3-0 defeat to Al Hilal. Ronaldo and Co. have since maintained their scoring record across every Saudi Pro League fixture.The draw against Al Khaleej also concluded Al Nassr's preparations for their AFC Champions League Elite campaign. They will begin their continental campaign away to Al Ain on September 16.Last season, Al Nassr competed in the AFC Champions League Two, reaching the final after winning all 10 matches before losing 1-0 to Gamba Osaka. Ronaldo's performances so far Following Portugal's early exit in the 2026 FIFA World Cup, 41-year-old Ronaldo returned to Al-Nassr for what he has indicated will likely be his final season in professional football. Fresh off winning the Saudi Pro League in May 2026—his first major trophy in Riyadh—Ronaldo is looking to defend the title in his 25th professional campaign.Although he missed the season opener against Al-Fateh after returning from his wedding to Georgina Rodriguez, he quickly made an impact upon his return. In his first post-World Cup appearance on August 21, Ronaldo came off the bench to score his 977th career goal, proving his legendary finishing ability remains intact. Over his first handful of league appearances in the 2026-27 season, he has already found the back of the net three times.

Sports Minister Mansukh Mandaviya Directs Hockey India And HIL Team Owners To Work On Revival Plan

New Delhi, (Agencies):

Trump Says Russia, Ukraine Agreed To Halt Strikes On Energy Targets As Diesel Prices Surge In US

USA, (Agencies) :

US President Donald Trump has claimed that Russia and Ukraine have agreed to stop attacking each other's energy infrastructure, in a move he said could help ease pressure on global diesel supplies. Trump made the claim in a post on his social media platform on Monday. He said Ukraine had agreed not to target Russian energy facilities and that Moscow had agreed to do the same.

United Kingdom breakup
“Ukraine has agreed not to hit Russian Energy targets. Russia has agreed to do, likewise!" Trump wrote. The claim comes a day after Trump urged Ukrainian President VolodymyrZelenskyy to stop targeting Russian oil refineries and diesel infrastructure. He argued that the strikes were contributing to a global shortage and pushing up diesel prices.

Zelenskyy Reacts After Trump's Claim

Soon after Trump's claim, Ukrainian President VolodymyrZelenskyy said Kyiv is ready for an agreement with Russia to stop attacks on critical infrastructure, including energy facilities, but warned that any such arrangement must be genuine and hold for the long term.His remarks came after US President Donald Trump claimed that Russia and Ukraine had agreed to stop targeting each other's energy infrastructure.

Trump said on Monday that Ukraine had agreed not to strike Russian energy targets and that Moscow had agreed to do the same.In a statement, Zelenskyy said food, energy supplies and other basic infrastructure must be protected. He also alleged that Russian attacks continue to target Ukrainian energy facilities, ports, logistics infrastructure and warehouses holding food and medicines.“If our partners are ready to ensure that Russia genuinely refrains from striking our electricity system, other energy facilities, critical infrastructure, and food supply routes, then, of course, we are ready to ensure a corresponding halt to our strikes," Zelenskyy said.He stressed that any agreement would need to be dependable and not simply a temporary pause.Zelenskyy also called for a broader end to the conflict, saying a halt to attacks on critical infrastructure could serve as an initial step towards peace.“The war must be brought to an end. And a de-escalatory step regarding critical infrastructure could be the first step toward peace," he said.

Trump Links Diesel Price Rise To Russia-Ukraine War

Trump also linked the rise in global diesel prices to the Russia-Ukraine conflict rather than the war involving Iran.“The World's Diesel price rise is mostly caused by the Russia/Ukraine War, not Iran," he said in his post.US diesel prices have crossed $6 a gallon, reaching a record level, amid wider disruptions to global fuel supplies. The International Energy Agency has also said disruptions to Russian refining and reduced Gulf exports have added to pressure on the diesel market.

No Confirmation From Kyiv Or

Moscow

Trump's announcement has not yet been independently confirmed by either side. Neither Kyiv nor Moscow has publicly confirmed that a mutual agreement to halt attacks on energy targets has been reached.The Kremlin has, however, welcomed Trump's earlier call for Ukraine to stop targeting Russian diesel facilities. Russian officials have also continued to discuss the possibility of further negotiations over the war. The reported understanding, if confirmed, would mark a significant development in the ongoing conflict, particularly as attacks on energy infrastructure have affected fuel supplies and added pressure to global energy markets.

Britain Once Divided India. Now Its Own Union Faces A Breakup: Why Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland Want To Exit UK

London , (Agencies):

Britain, which oversaw the Partition of India in 1947, is now facing demands for self-determination within its own borders. Representatives from Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland have signed a pact expressing their intention to move away from Westminster's control, putting fresh focus on the future of the United Kingdom.Leaders of Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland on Monday signed a memorandum of understanding calling for constitutional change and asserting their nations' right to decide their own future. The Scottish National Party (SNP), Plaid Cymru in Wales and the pro-Irish unity Sinn Féin want to break away from the UK, although under different timelines and conditions. Scottish First Minister John Swinney, Welsh leader RhunapIorwerth and Northern Ireland First Minister Michelle O'Neill signed the agreement at a summit in Cardiff.

Why This Moment Is Different
For the first time, pro-independence or nationalist parties are simultaneously leading the devolved governments in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. The SNP in Scotland, Plaid Cymru in Wales and Sinn Féin in Northern Ireland are coordinating their demands.In September 2026, the three parties signed a joint memorandum of understanding in Cardiff, asserting their right to self-determination and future referendums.Three developments have strengthened the case for such demands since the 2014 Scottish independence referendum and the post-Good Friday period. The first is political alignment. Nationalist parties now hold power in all three devolved capitals.The second is Brexit. Scotland voted 62 per cent to remain in the European Union in 2016 but left the EU after the UK-wide result. Nationalists describe this as a “material change in circumstances" that justifies another independence referendum. The third is growing external and political pressure. US President Donald Trump has publicly supported Irish reunification, while UK Prime Minister Andy Burnham has said he would authorise another Scottish referendum if there were a “clear consensus".Polling in 2026 puts support for independence at about 47 per cent in Scotland and 32 per cent in Wales. In Northern Ireland, around 36 per cent support reunification with Ireland.

Scotland's Case For Independence

Scottish nationalists argue that independence would allow the country to take greater control of its political and economic choices.One of their main arguments is what they call a democratic deficit. Scotland's preferences on issues such as social spending, taxation and closer ties with Europe can be diluted or overridden at Westminster, where England's larger population has greater influence.Brexit remains central to the argument. Scotland voted to stay in the EU but was taken out because of the UK-wide vote. Independence, nationalists argue, could provide a route towards EU membership and access to the single market.They also want greater control over taxation, welfare, industrial policy and revenues from North Sea and renewable energy. These powers, they say, could help address economic stagnation, demographic pressures and regional inequality. Scotland already has separate legal, education and health systems under devolution. Supporters of independence argue that full sovereignty would bring constitutional status closer to Scotland's political identity. Unionists, however, warn of fiscal uncertainty, questions over currency and the loss of UK-wide economic and security support.

Why Northern Ireland Wants A United Ireland

Northern Ireland presents a different constitutional question. Its nationalists are not seeking an independent state but reunification with the Republic of Ireland.The 1998 Good Friday Agreement provides for a border poll if it “appears likely" that a majority would support leaving the UK. Sinn Féin and other nationalists want to test whether that threshold has been reached.Demographic and cultural changes have also kept the issue alive. The growing Catholic and nationalist population, stronger Irish identification among younger voters and trade difficulties following Brexit have all contributed to the debate.The EU is another factor. Reunification would mean Northern Ireland returning to the EU through the Republic of Ireland, which many nationalists view as an economic and political advantage after Brexit.SinnFéin now leads the Northern Ireland executive, giving pro-unity politics greater institutional influence.Unionists warn of disruption, concerns over Protestant identity and unresolved questions over healthcare, welfare and fiscal transfers in a united Ireland.

Wales Joins The Debate
Welsh independence has traditionally had less support than Scottish independence, but the movement has expanded. Polls in 2026 show around 32 per cent backing independence, its highest recorded level, following Plaid Cymru's breakthrough in the May Seneddlection.Welsh nationalists argue that Westminster retains control over important areas including major taxation, welfare and macroeconomic policy. They say this limits Wales' ability to tackle poverty, underinvestment and regional inequality.The Cardiff pact also sets out a vision of Wales becoming an independent EU member. This fits with the broader “Europe is our common home" position shared by Scottish and Irish nationalists.Language and cultural identity are also important to the Welsh case, with greater self-government seen as a way to protect Welsh institutions and promote the Welsh language.Experts, however, point to Wales' fiscal deficit and reliance on UK transfers, arguing that independence could carry major economic risks.

BREXIT, EU Membership And Economic Angle

Brexit has become the central catalyst behind the debate over the UK's future. In the 2016 referendum, the UK voted to leave the European Union, but Scotland and Northern Ireland voted to remain – by 62% and 55.8%, respectively.For Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, the economic argument for breaking away from the UK is closely linked to returning to the European Union. Nationalists argue that, after Brexit, EU membership could offer greater opportunities than remaining within a post-BrexitUK.At the centre of the argument is access to the EU single market, which covers 27 countries and allows the free movement of goods, services, capital and people. Rejoining the bloc could reduce trade barriers, bureaucracy and the costs created by separate UK and EU regulations.EU membership would also give the three nations access to trade agreements negotiated by the bloc, providing smaller economies with greater bargaining power in international markets. This could particularly benefit sectors such as agriculture, seafood and niche manufacturing.

Northern Ireland's Special Position

Northern Ireland already has a different post-Brexit arrangement under the Windsor Framework. It remains within the UK customs territory but follows many EU rules for goods, giving businesses access to both the UK and EU markets. Nationalists argue that reunification with Ireland would secure these advantages through full EU membership. Unionists, however, dispute the economic case, pointing to transition costs, currency questions and the benefits of remaining part of the UK's internal market and fiscal system.

No Relief To SRK, Ajay Devgn And Tiger Shroff As Delhi HC Dismisses Plea Over FDA Notices

DINESH SINGH :

The Delhi High Court has dismissed a plea filed by PB Agro, the company associated with VimalElaichi, challenging show-cause notices issued by the Maharashtra Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to Bollywood actors Shah Rukh Khan, Ajay Devgn and Tiger Shroff over an alleged surrogate advertisement for Vimal pan masala. Justice Swarana Kanta Sharma dismissed the petition, holding that the matter did not fall within the Delhi High Court's territorial jurisdiction. The court observed that Maharashtra would be the more appropriate forum for raising the grievances and objections arising from the notices issued by the state

FDA. The court further held that the petitioner had failed to establish that any substantial or material part of the cause of action had arisen in Delhi. PB Agro had argued that the Delhi High Court had jurisdiction to entertain the matter as the company was based in Delhi, while its advertising campaign was allegedly conceptualised, prepared and managed from the national capital. The company had also contended that payments to the brand ambassadors were made from Delhi. However, the court rejected these grounds and noted that the show-cause notices had not been issued to PB Agro itself. The company had also not been called upon to file a response, remove any advertisement, produce documents or appear before the Maharashtra FDA. The dispute relates to notices issued by the Maharashtra FDA to Shah Rukh Khan, Ajay Devgn and Tiger Shroff in connection with the alleged surrogate promotion of Vimal pan masala. The actors have been associated with advertisements for VimalElaichi, a product marketed by the company. Earlier on Monday, the Delhi High Court had reserved its verdict on the jurisdictional issue after hearing the plea filed by PB Agro. The company had sought directions to quash the show-cause notices issued by the Maharashtra FDA. During the hearing, the petitioner argued that the notices were issued only to the actors and not to the company, despite PB Agro being the entity that could suffer irreparable harm from any action concerning the advertisement. It also contended that the Maharashtra FDA lacked jurisdiction to issue directions seeking to halt the advertisement. The Centre and the Central Consumer Protection Authority (CCPA), however, opposed the maintainability of the petition before the Delhi High Court. They argued that the company should have approached the Bombay High Court since the impugned action had been taken by the Maharashtra FDA. The CCPA submitted that although it was examining the issue independently, it had no objection to the Maharashtra FDA issuing the notices.
